WHY STUDY THROUGH DISTANCE LEARNING?

Moorhouse Black's distance learning via videoconferencing extends the choice of subjects that you can study at college, using a unique method of learning. They have been providing successful courses to students for over 10 years.

So, how does it work?

- As a student taking this AS level via distance learning you will receive a one-hour videoconferenced tutorial with a Moorhouse Black tutor every week with other students in your college studying the same course.
- The interactive tutorial gives you the chance to ask questions and discuss each week's work with both your tutor and your group.
- The rest of your work is completed through studying on your own or with others in your group; you'll need to complete about 4-5 hours of independent study a week.

HOW DOES IT HELP YOU?

- You will learn valuable independent study skills which are highly valued by universities and employers alike.
- Smaller group sizes mean that you get more one-to-one tuition and the chance to excel in your chosen subject.
- You can work at your own pace when completing your independent study.
