

Leanne Harvey, 1997

What Career are you in, and what sort of things does this entail?

Project Management in the education sector. This involves relationship building, time management, risk management managing of budgets, management of workloads and general planning and organisation to deliver projects with an timescale of 12 to 18 months before student use.

What inspired you to go into your chosen career?

This was not my chosen career .I originally wanted to go into law but as I progressed through my career journey, it led me to this and I realise this is what I love.

What advice would you give to anyone interested in working in your career area?

How you build and manage relationships with people is key, the rest will follow. If you don't enjoy working and communicating with people to reach your mutual end goal, this job is not for you.

What do you know now, that you wish you'd known when you were leaving Malbank?

Whilst you may have an idea of what you want to do with within your career be open to follow other pathways on your way there and see what the journey brings. You will experience many opportunities within your career pathway that should be experienced to ensure you reach where you belong.
