

Amy Fowles, 2003

What Career are you in, and what sort of things does this entail?

Director of Education for an independent training provider in further education. Managing a national team of teachers to deliver apprenticeships and adult learning provision.

What inspired you to go into your chosen career?

A passion for learning developed from my own education and enabling those who did not have the same opportunities to engage them with learning at any stage of life

What advice would you give to anyone interested in working in your career area?

Take every chance to learn, go into every situation recognising it as an opportunity and it will be

What do you know now, that you wish you'd known when you were leaving Malbank?

That not knowing where you want to be is ok and that every choice opens another door. You will more than likely end up in an entirely different place than you expect but every life and career experience contributes to these choices and you will be better for them. Your choices now impact you short term but you will have so many more opportunities to build on these and you don't have to know right now where you want to end up
