

Lisa Williams, 1997

What Career are you in, and what sort of things does this entail?

Senior curriculum quality lead- managing a team to ensure quality throughout apprenticeships within a private training provider.

What inspired you to go into your chosen career?

I started working as a nursery practitioner and progressed to deputy manager. I realised how much I enjoyed using my skills and knowledge to support and encourage others to achieve their aspirations. I worked as a tutor coach for childcare and business and then progressed into a quality role.

What advice would you give to anyone interested in working in your career area?

It is hard work but extremely rewarding and gives you a sense of pride and achievement when those that you've supported achieve their goals. This career area has many possibilities within further education.

What do you know now, that you wish you'd known when you were leaving Malbank?

I wish I'd known more about apprenticeships and how rewarding they are, as not everyone is academic and there are other ways to reach your career goals.
